An excited crowd of family members, friends and fellow Airmen welcomed home deployed members from the 41st Airlift Squadron on May 15 at Little Rock Air Force Base. After more than six months down-range, approximately 20 Airmen were reunited with their families after supporting combat airlift operations in Afghanistan.

Airman stops suicide, saves friend's life

Intervene.

It's something military members hear all too often. "Be a wingman." "Step up." "Do the right thing in the wrong situation."

But when we are faced with that all-or-nothing chance to do so, how many are brave enough to answer the call?

Senior Airman Derrick Dotta, 314th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron dual rails specialist, was faced with this decision from the outside of a locked closet door when he stopped his friend's suicide attempt.

"Oct. 10, 2014, my wife and I went to Sam's house to barbecue with him, his son and girlfriend, Amber," said Dotta. "When we arrived, we could tell Sam had been drinking, but he seemed fine. After dinner, he got up to put his son to bed. But when he appeared from his son's room, instantaneously, he seemed distraught."

Sam began to display behavior that immediately caused concern for Dotta and the other adults present.

Sam entered the kitchen and slammed the refrigerator door before heading back to his son's room, and this time Amber followed behind him. After a few moments she returned to the table, but Sam went into his bedroom in silence.

"His girlfriend came from his son's room and said, 'Sam told his son he was never going to see him again, how much he loved and meant to him,'" said Dotta. "We went to Sam's room to find out what he was talking about and make sure he was okay. When we went into his room his bathroom door was locked. After knocking on the door and him not responding, we heard the sound of what appeared to be a gun slide."

Dotta instructed his wife and Amber to leave the room, go outside and see if anyone could help. They found some neighbors across the street and instructed them to call 911. While trying to get Sam to open the door, Dotta heard 2-3 gun shots, which he later found out where from a small caliber rifle.

"Once I heard the gun fire, I immediately kicked open the bathroom door expecting the worst" he said. "Then I heard him in his walk-in closet, where he had previously put a lock on the door because that is where he kept all his guns. I saw a pair of toe nail clippers on the counter and used that to open the door."

When Dotta found Sam, he was sitting on the floor loading a shotgun. He tried talking to him, but Sam didn't initially respond.

"He finally began to talk about how his father died by suicide and his friends died while deployed. He said there was no point for him to be here, and he didn't have a family anymore. I told him his son needed him, and if he did what he was thinking of doing, his son would be just as upset as he was."

Dotta continued talking to him in hopes of de-escalating the situation and raising Sam's awareness for reasons to live. He asked Sam to hand over the gun so they could go to the bedroom and talk. He said Sam hesitated for a while, but eventually gave Dotta the gun.

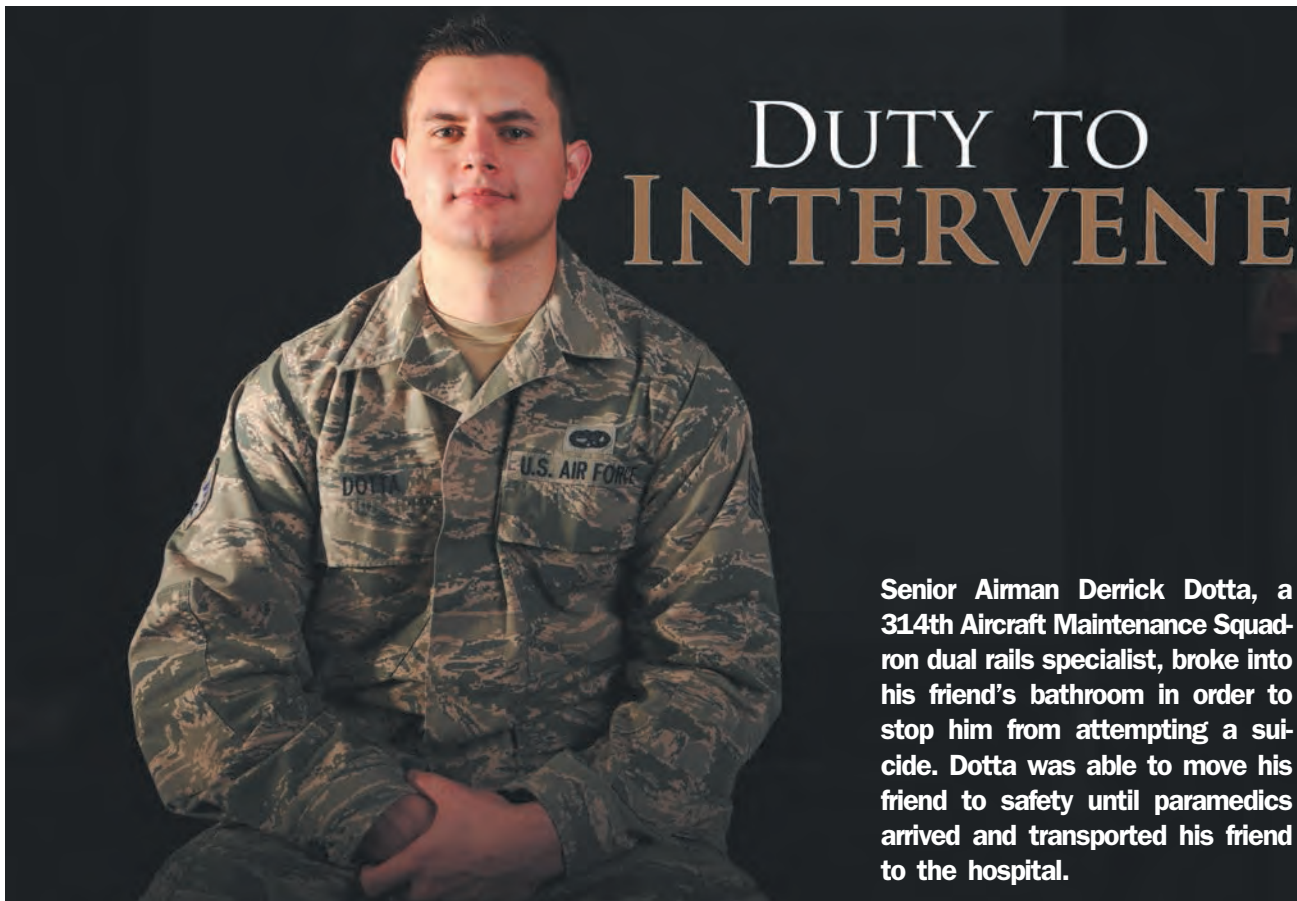

Moments later, the police arrived along with paramedics. Sam was taken to the hospital where he was evaluated and treated.

Looking back, Dotta said he now realizes the risks associated with intervening in that moment, but the possible outcome of not stepping up would have been more devastating.

"Although it was a risky situation, he was my friend," he said. "I didn't want to see him hurt himself. He has a young child that I know needs him."

Little Rock Air Force Base along with the Air Force have undertaken several initiatives

DUTY TO INTERVENE

Senior Airman Derrick Dotta, a 314th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron dual rails specialist, broke into his friend's bathroom in order to stop him from attempting a suicide. Dotta was able to move his friend to safety until paramedics arrived and transported his friend to the hospital.

to improve resilience, encourage help-seeking, improve identification of Airman at risk for suicide, pinpoint self-destructive behaviors and involve everyone in reducing and preventing suicide.

Commanders' calls, face-to-face supervision discussions, as well as squadron briefings, are all tools used to raise awareness for the risk of suicide, enforce the seriousness of suicide, encourage Airmen to seek help, challenge wingmen to intervene, and ultimately reduce the risk and occurrence of suicide. The same message is delivered in several avenues to ensure Airmen know they are not alone, but when faced with a suicidal situation, the information is embedded in the Airmen and they remember how to respond.

"In all honesty, one of the most memorable briefings I've had about suicide prevention is from computer based training," he said. "Most Airmen dread CBTs, but it should be taken seriously. You never know who is being affected by depression or other related issues, and you could put your knowledge learned into action to help."

Today, Dotta said Sam is seeking counseling and doing much better coping with his issues.

All wingmen have two key responsibilities. The first is to keep themselves physically and

MISSION SPOTLIGHT

Capt. Nigel Skeete

314th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron Gold Aircraft Maintenance Unit
“Bulldogs” Officer in Charge

Why is your job important?

I ensure that maintainers have the tools, training and resources needed to maintain aircraft and stay mission-ready.

What is your favorite part about your job?

I enjoy the validation of knowing that maintainers are taken care of and I enjoy overcoming challenges to meet mission requirements every day.

What is your most memorable experience working here?

I’ll always remember coming into my office and seeing it covered with plastic, pink flamingos. Even though it was a prank, it made me feel accepted by my production team.

What is your most significant accomplishment at Little Rock AFB?

Being able to contribute daily in providing initial training for all future C-130J aircrews is a big achievement.

Don't get bruised when bumped from flight

Courtesy Base Legal Office

We've all been there on TDY – waiting on an overbooked flight, wondering if we're going to get "bumped" from the flight.

Rarely though do many people on official travel think about whether they get to keep the benefits or compensation earned in return for getting "bumped." The following advice could not only keep you out of trouble, it can also mean a free flight on your next vacation.

Whether you can keep compensation or benefits when bumped from an overbooked flight during official travel turns on whether the bump was involuntary or whether you volunteer. As strange as it sounds, if you are involuntarily bumped from a flight, the benefits you get in return are property of the government.

On the other hand, if you get the benefits or compensation in return for voluntarily giving up your seat to catch a later flight, you may keep any of that compensation – so long as: 1) taking the later flight doesn't result in additional cost to the Government, and 2) the delay will not interfere with the mission. (That means you can't claim extra per diem, hotel costs, etc. for the extra time spent away from home to take a later flight.)

So, if you're on official travel, you've got the ability to take a later flight without interfering with the mission, and you are worried you might get bumped involuntarily, think about volunteering to give up your seat. It could mean the difference between sitting at home or on the beach during your next block of leave. For the specific rules, please consult the Joint Travel Regulations, Paragraphs 1300C.1 and 1300C.2.

If you have any ethics questions, visit the Little Rock AFB Legal Office located on the second floor of Bldg 1250, or call 501-987-7886.

Spring means misery for many

By Senior Airman Stephanie Serrano

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Imagine a bright sunny day with blue skies, and the temperature is just right. The smell of fresh cut grass and flowers blooming in the distance fills the air. The sound of busy bees buzzing around lets you know spring is here.

It looks like a beautiful day, but then suddenly you begin to sneeze. There is an irritating itch in your eyes, and soon you become congested.

Allergies are caused from an array of sources, but during spring, the pollen of various seasonal plants are usually the main cause.

Pollen enters the body through the nose, mouth and eyes. For most people, the immune system views it as a mild substance and doesn't react, but for those with seasonal allergies, their immune system goes into defense mode and attacks the foreign substance releasing histamine.

"Some people produce more histamine than others," said Staff Sgt. Ryan Duckett, a 19th Medical Operations Squadron allergy and immunizations technician. "This is why medicine prescribed is an antihistamine, to stop the body from continuing to release it."

Symptoms can range from a runny nose and coughing to wheezing and hives.

Most of the time, allergy symptoms can be prevented early by taking approved over-the-counter products to help with symptoms before they are present.

"It's best to consult your primary care manager first," said Senior Airman Teresa Johnson, a 19th Medical Operations Squadron allergy and immunizations technician. "That way, a person isn't taking the wrong medicine, technicians can assist in allergy tests or put in a referral to point someone in the correct direction."

Senior Airman Scott Poe
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The 19th Civil Engineer Squadron water and fuel systems maintenance shop is responsible for maintenance and repair of water, sewer, natural gas and aircraft fuel pipelines throughout the base. They move more than 500,000 gallons of water per day through 56 miles of pipes providing Team Little Rock members living on base water to shower, hydrate, brush their teeth, flush toilets, and wash clothes and cars. Water is tested daily for chlorine and pH levels ensuring safety for the TLR community. The shop is also responsible for maintaining more than 55 miles of sewer pipes, 21 miles of natural gas pipes and 7.5 miles of fuel pipes. The jet fuel pipes deliver 4.2 million gallons of fuel from bulk storage to the flightline and on average they distribute 70,000 gallons per day. The team also maintains the base pool, keeping the water clear and safe.

USAF 50 Summit Challenge: Air Force Leading the Way

By Senior Airman Stephanie Serrano

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Beginning in 2005, a group of Air Force members set out to hike to the top of the highest peaks on all seven continents and display the Air Force flag. After conquering the Seven Summit challenge in May of 2013, members created the 50 Summit challenge. Airmen, along with family and friends, are invited to hike to the highest point in each of our 50 states, carrying the Air Force flag and proudly flying it at the top. The challenge was designed for Airmen to have fun, expand personal boundaries and get outdoors.

After hearing about the challenge during a safety conference, Senior Master Sgt. Michael Francis, 188th Wing ground safety noncommissioned officer in charge, approached Chief Master Sgt. Ronald Redding, 188th Civil Engineer Squadron installation emergency manager, with the idea of hosting the Arkansas High Point Mount Magazine 50 Summit Challenge.

The two decided to take on the project and became team leads, organizing the May 8, 2015 event. The event was open to all Air Force members, families and friends.

Air Force members and families stationed in Arkansas begin their 10.5 mile hike to the top of Mount Magazine on May 8 at Mount Magazine State Park. There were approximately 75 Airmen and families that showed up for the event.

The morning of the hike started out a bit gloomy with scattered thunderstorms forecasted throughout the day. However, the weather didn't deter the approximate 75 Air Force members and families who met at Cove Lake in Paris, Arkansas to hike the 10.5 miles to the top of Mount Magazine.

"I think the turnout was remarkable considering the severe weather threat," said Redding.

After a quick safety briefing, a short message from the chaplain and the recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance, members divided into teams to begin their strenuous hike to the top.

The hike definitely had many challenges along the way, apart from being so long. Airman crossed streams, climbed steep hills, and hiked a good couple of miles in the rain.

Due to the conditions of the hike, there were two opt-out points along the way. At mile three and mile seven, Airmen were able to get water from the volunteers as well as if needed, obtain a ride to the rally point.

The trek went on for more than four hours.

"Seeing how everyone was enthusiastic and being great wingmen helping and encouraging each other was great," said Redding.

Slowly as all the Airmen made it to the rally point, the group gathered once more to make its final trek to the peak as a team.

Once at the top, the group gathered around the Mount Magazine "Highest Peak of Arkansas" sign, posed for a group photo with the Air Force, P.O.W/M.I.A, American, Sheep Dog and Arkansas Flags, and sang the Air Force song.

"Hiking the highest peak in Arkansas with fellow Airmen and their families on a less than perfect day; muddy trails, swift creeks and rain was awesome. There was a great sense of accomplishment when we made it to the top of the mountain with our entire team," said Master Sgt. Greg Qualls, 188th Mission Support Group command support staff secretary.

After completing the hike, volunteers drove the Airmen back down the mountain for a much-earned free lunch.

"It was a total success in my eyes," said Redding. "The Arkansas High Point Challenge has set the bar very high for the other states to follow. We are looking at future possible events and hoping to make it more challenging and open it up to the other military branches and first responder agencies."

LRAFB HISTORY FAST FACT

TEAM LITTLE ROCK HISTORY
FACT OF THE WEEK • 139 DAYS
TO GO UNTIL LRAFB TURNS 60!

In May 1959, workers finished the Capehart Housing project at Little Rock Air Force Base and families began moving in immediately. Work started two years earlier as part of a larger Department of Defense plan to correct inadequacies of housing availability for servicemen. The Capehart Housing project here was the first and largest government housing project constructed under the Capehart Housing Act, named after Sen. Homer Capehart. The 1,535 newly constructed homes cost $16,500 per unit and were built with all of the modern conveniences of the era, including central heating, air conditioning, garbage disposals and laundry facilities. With more than 5,500 personnel assigned to the base, the completion of the construction project relieved severe housing shortages members had endured for almost five years.
